

Billie Elliot

Example. Stephen Daldry explores these themes by telling the stories of various characters. Billy battles with the loss of his mother and his father's opposition to him dancing (adversity) Billy's father Jackie struggle with being on strike and losing control of his life. Billy starts dancing lessons to pursue his dream of being professional dancer.

Near the start of the movie Billy attends a boxing lesson that his dad pays 50 pence for which his father thought it was wasted because Billy is not essentially good at boxing so his father becomes very frustrated and angry because he's forking out 50 pence that could be used to help the family's struggle

Identity as the film progresses we explore the ways Billie feels like an outsider and wants to find where he belongs and I believe Billie feels like everyone else knows who they are but he doesn't understand who he is, until

He discovers dancing example (feels like electricity)

Following dreams when Billie discovers his dreams through dancing he doesn't listen to what is said to him and goes against everyone who says no until they allow him to pursue his dream.

Conclusion we can tell that during the film that this family is in grief of a lost family member the mother this shows that the family is in great stress and haven't had a great run but still tries to be positive Billie tries and does this by finding his new passion dancing that at first his family doesn't agree with but later on shows them that anyone should be able to follow their dreams no matter what that dream might be.